TEXT 1: How to travel in a responsible way

1 As flying is one of the biggest causes of global warming, we should all play our part by avoiding unnecessary flights. Why not come to Britain by water or use the Channel Tunnel? Flying may be more economical, but seeing the white cliffs of Dover from a ferry can be quite an experience in itself!

2 No one is expecting you to become fluent, but learn some simple words and phrases, such as 'please' and 'thank you' in Welsh. You will be surprised at how much nicer and more helpful people will be if they know you're making an effort to engage in the culture of their region!

3 By booking with a foreign tour operator, staying in an international hotel chain and eating at a fast food place, none of your holiday budget goes to the community you are visiting. Use regional products and services, which help to support small communities in Britain.

4 Local customs may be different from our own. Take your time to learn what is acceptable and what isn't. By reading up on local traditions you can avoid inappropriate actions, such as jumping the queue or pointing at people with your finger!

5 When staying in a hotel or a bed and breakfast, why not take a shower instead of having a bath every day? You can help to avoid water shortages, which have become a big problem in some parts of Britain during the last few summers.

6 Bring your own water bottle and be sure to fill it whenever possible. Take your own bag and don't accept plastic bags for every single souvenir you buy. Pack rechargeable batteries for your camera and don't forget the battery charger.

TEXT 2: Coastal Erosion – a problem for tourism

Reporter: Coastal erosion is becoming an ever bigger problem along the eastern coast of England. We are here today near the town of Southwold to speak to Peter Boggis, the owner of a hotel complex. Hi Peter!

Peter: Hello, thank you for coming out here to my place.

Reporter: Peter, you have some problems with the North Sea...

Peter: Indeed. It has been eating away at my property.

Reporter: And how much of your land has disappeared into the sea?

Peter: Well, 180 metres have gone since the early 50s. That is nearly half of the land I own! Walk to the cliff top with me and I'll show you. (walking noises)

Peter: Look, the area next to the hotel complex was where the tennis court used to be. We also had a football field laid out there for future competitions, but all that has gone. Unfortunately, we haven't found a suitable location for new sports facilities so far.

Reporter: And what's over there?

Peter: Oh, just the end of the lane. It doesn't lead anywhere anymore, although it used to. This is where some 300 metres have been lost to the sea since 1950. The twelve holiday houses that stood here have all been taken by the sea.

Reporter: That's horrible. (truck noises and noises of sea birds in the distance)

Reporter: So here we are at the top of the cliff. Wow! What an incredible sight! I can see about twenty trucks offloading sand and stones.

Peter: Yes, I've decided to take matters into my own hands and built my own sea defence. I've organized up to 50 trucks a day to dump material at the bottom of the cliff. This way I help local builders to get rid of their construction waste - like sand, bricks and stones - and they help me to save my property.

Reporter: Amazing! Well, thank you Peter for your time and the interesting conversation and good luck for the future!

TEXT 4: Discovering Essex

Lisa Bone: Hello, Essex Tourist Visitor Centre, Lisa Bone speaking. How can I help you?

Paul Oldman: Hello, this is Paul Oldman. Er, I'm planning a short stay in Essex. Can you give me an idea, what's special about Essex?

LB: Well Sir, Essex is certainly worth a visit. While most of England's southern coast is rocky Essex is famous for its sandy beaches that go on for miles.

PO: Are there also some events you can recommend?

LB: There's the Maldon Mud Race. It encourages all those who want to take part in a run across the mud of Maldon's river, the Blackwater, as best they can. The mud is really wet and slippery! It's extremely funny because competitors often dress up in fancy dress and you can see clowns, queens and pirates falling into the mud.

PO: I can imagine that, but I'd prefer something less ... dirty (chuckling). I'd rather go for something to do with music or literature and ...

LB: Well, there is The Essex Book Festival, the main literature event in the UK. It runs throughout the month of March, and many well-known personalities appear.

PO: Well, I really like films, too.

LB: Or there's The Little Big Screen Festival. Chelmsford is celebrating the tenth anniversary of the Crampthorne Film Project by holding a film festival. What's unique about it is that everybody can send in their homemade short films.

PO: Oh that's wonderful! I've just filmed my dog doing some new tricks. One thing...

LB: All right, sounds exciting... So, when are you planning to visit Essex?

PO: I was thinking about summer.

LB Then, perhaps you would like to see the historic boat race during Burnham Week from August 13 to 20, in which ancient boats compete against each other.

PO When can I book tickets?

LB The booking period always starts one month in advance of the event. So you can make up your mind later and once you've decided, contact my colleague Correne DEWHURST by e-mail. Let me give you her e-mail address, it's
C O R R E N E . D E W H U R S T @ v i s i t e s s e x . c o . u k .

PO Thank you so much. You've been very helpful. Good bye.

LB Good bye, sir.

TEXT 5: Cornwall – a surfer's paradise and much more

Interviewer: We're at Widemouth Bay near Bude in Cornwall and with me are two surfers, Mike, the owner of Raven Surfschool, and Judy, a student from London. Judy, is this the first time you've come to Cornwall?

Judy: It's the second time actually. I came here to do some practical training in a hotel last summer. After a few weeks, I decided to take surfing lessons and that's how I met Mike and his team.

Interviewer: What is it exactly that made you return to this place? I mean, why didn't you try out somewhere else for going surfing this summer – Spain, France or maybe even Hawaii?

Judy: Well, actually... it WAS because of Widemouth Bay that I came back! It's really fantastic, the sun is on the beach almost all of the day and the sunsets here are just amazing! Besides, there are hundreds of rock pools to be explored where you can discover starfish, crabs and so on...

Interviewer: Sounds wonderful! Mike, when did you first think of starting your surf school here in Widemouth Bay?

Mike: You know, my mum got me surfing on this beach for the first time when I was 6 and I've always been a very keen surfer. But, actually, the idea of having my own surf school was born when I got married. My wife Nicky and I spent our honeymoon in Sri Lanka and I taught her to surf. It went really well and ... when we returned, Nicky insisted that we start Raven Surfschool. Well, our plan worked out!

Interviewer: Obviously! Judy, apart from this wonderful beach, where would you recommend visitors to go?

Judy: Actually, just a short distance from here, you can walk up "High Cliff", the highest cliff in Cornwall! It is 731 feet high and is just overwhelming! It's definitely my favourite – after the beach, of course.

Interviewer: That goes without saying (laughing)... And you Mike, which places in the area do you like best?

Mike: When you can drag yourself away from the beach there's the seaside resort of Bude less than ten minutes away by car. I think the best way to get to know a little more about the people and their history is by visiting the many little villages and towns in the area. I would also definitely recommend going on a cruise to Lundy Island. The island has a medieval castle, three lighthouses and it's England's first and only marine national park. What's more, it's home to a variety of seabirds and native ponies and even offers opportunities for diving and seal watching.

Interviewer: That sounds really great! I'm sure Cornwall will be our listeners' next holiday destination! Thank you guys for the interview! Have fun and enjoy the rest of the season!
